WHOLE NO. 1590.

Speech of Horace Greeley. ade at Saratoga Springs, August 4th, or sion of a serenade tendered to him at the Union Hotel, during the sitting of the New York Republican State Convention:

My Friends: I presume I am indebted to the kindness of one of your number only for this attention, or whatever it may be called, and I will simply say a few words to you in response. Perhaps the fact that I am rather an older politician and an older editor than some of my cotemporaries is the reason why I am singled out from the great number who are here to-night, for something like a personal compliment; and I will therefore speak to the younger persons who are coming after me in my long career, and will suggest some considerations which may be useful to those who are now coming upon the stage of action.

It is commonly believed that the life of an active politician leads him to grass.

gest some considerations which may be useful to those who are now coming upon the stage of action.

It is commonly believed that the life of an active politician leads him to grasp some temporary reward or aggrandizement, but the end of it is dust and ashes. I wish to give my testimony, as that of one nearly 60 years of age, and who for 40 years has been actively engaged in political strife, and that without holding office or attaining wealth or position, that I feel that my cereer has been a satisfactory one. I rejoice to think that my pen has had some little inducence in effectually settling some of the great questions of the sge. I rejoicingly feel that, if my name shall be known at all in the next century, men will say of me "He was one of those who fought against Human Slavery until Human Slavery disappeared from this country." That is to me a proud satisfaction—that, in the turmoil and tumult of political strife, there has been something more than mere agitation. Through years of political contention, there has been developed a sentiment which has swept III. and Slavery out of cur country, and will soon sweep it off the iace of the earth.

I feel also that the great subject of Popular Education has made substantial progress in my time—progress in that which I feel sure is the right direction. We have in this State, as they have in other States, come by slow degrees to a clear comprehension of the truth that the education of all men's children in this Republic is every man's interest and every man's duty—that I need a common school in my district, not because I have or have not children, but because It is my interest that all children should be educated.

Then, as to the great Temporance Reform—probably not yet comprehended, ren should be educated.

Then, as to the great Temperance Reform—probably not yet comprehended, even by its advocates. When I think of the large proportion of the American people who have bunded themselves together in a common resolve not to drink and not to incite others to drink, because they believe our country better without strong drink than with it, I feel that there is in such action not a moral wayse. drink than with it, I feet that there is in such action not a moral purpose in such action not a moral purpose is in such action not a moral purpose merely, but a moral attitude which may well challenge the admiration of the intelligent and reflecting. It proves that there is in a republic like ours elements of progress, and elements of improvement, which will tend ever and ever to the purification and elevation of the masses. I twice, in former years, traveled over Europe, and I found there many things better them we have here; but when I had crossed the British Channel, I traveled perhaps 2,000 miles on the continent, yet never once heard of a public meeting to promote education or temperance, or any sgeneral or social reform. Now is it not something to be citizens in a republic like this wherein men and women in the humblest stations in life are considering by what means they may promote the good of their fellows, and make the world better for their having lived in it?

I rejoice that so many great and good works have been promoted—some of them I may say completed—in my day. The success of these efforts had made easy and secure the triumphs which you myour time will be called to achieve. In the faith that you will be found equal to your light representations and that your victo—light results and that your victo—light results and that your victo—light results and the tour victo—light results and the vour victo—light results and the victor of the results and the victor

The discovery of the secret treaty hich Belgium was to be sacrificed for Napoleon s s grandizement has directed matters now stand both the French and the Prussians have guaranteed the treaty has created so much uneasines specially in England, that the occupat on of the country by the latter power, is heen increased to one hundred th usend and placed on a war footing to await con ingeneral. There has been considerable activity also in the different fortresses in the kingdom, all or which have been over hauled and placed in readiness for defense against assault from unfriendly powers As Mr Disraeli said recently, Lurope would recard the 'absorption of Belgium by France as a disaster, and hence the anxiety of the English, not less than of the Belgians themselves, to preserve in eact the territory and independence of this small but formidable barrier between the two great powers of the continent

A correspondent of the Charlottesville (Va.) Chrenicle relates the following almost incredible story:

A very remarkable phenomenon occurred in this county on Taesday last, which no one can explain. As the miller at Mr. Thomase Ayler's mill, situated on one of the tiributaries of Robinson river, was sitting existly in the mill on the avening. the tributaries of Robinson river, was sitting quistly in the mill on the evening of that day, he was surprised at a sudden peal, as of thunder, and on getting up and going to the window he perceived that his dam was blown up, and the tremendous logs of wheh it was built were flying sixty feet in the air. Some of them were thrown a distance of seventy-five yurds, and the whole dam entirely demolished. In a corn field some three or four hundred yards below the dam about two-thirds of First Come, First Served! yards below the dam about two-thirds of the curs of corn were shaken from the stalk and scattered wer the ground. The evening was perfectly clear, with the exception of a fow very insignificant looking clouds low down in the eastern sky; and the sun was shining brightly at the time this inex-ideable phenomenon presented itself. Some persons suppose that a torpedo must have been placed under the dam by the Yankees during the wer, and that the time had just arrived for it to go off. Others think that a thunderbolt came from these clouds in the east, passing through the corn fild, and knocked off the ears that fell (leaving the remaining ears or seed and fodder intact for winter uso I suppose), and striking the rock ing ears or seed and fodder intact for win-ter uso I suppose), and striking the rock on which the dam was built, which ex-tended up on dry land, following it down under the water and the dam, and bursted there, causing the destruction. Neither surmise seems very probable. Miscellancous.
